

CHANGE IN NAMES OF AVENUES SOON

Rock Island Municipal Commission Considers Ordinance Designating Thoroughfares.

NUMBER CONFUSION IS AVOIDED

Object Is to Make House Markings in West End Uniform, Particularly on Eleventh Street.

Names of three avenues in Rock Island are to be changed. The city commission yesterday considered an ordinance providing for the modifications, which are:

Highway now known as Eleventh avenue, from Eleventh to Twenty-third streets, henceforth to be Twelfth avenue.

Highway now known as Twelfth avenue, from Eleventh to Twenty-second streets, henceforth to be Thirteenth avenue.

Highway now known as Fourteenth avenue, from Eleventh to Fifteenth street, henceforth to be Fifteenth avenue.

Change in the names of these streets was urged by Postmaster H. P. Simpson two weeks ago, when at the invitation of the commission he talked over matters in connection with a closer cooperation between the municipal authorities and the postoffice department.

It develops that house numbers on Eleventh street were arranged confusingly because of the manner in which the avenues intersected the street. Houses on one side would be in the 1200 block, while on the other side, further north, homes would be numbered in the 1300 block. The ordinance will eliminate this confusion.

Petition of the Rock Island Chautauqua association to be given permission to use a part of Reservoir park for 10 days in the latter part of July was referred to a committee of Commissioner Juhl, Rudgren and Murrin.

Petition of J. H. Murray, who offered his services as municipal blacksmith for a permanent, all year job, with the idea of having a city blacksmith shop in the new barn and attend to all of the horses owned by the city, was referred to Commissioner Juhl.

Petition of 10 property owners, asking that a sewer be constructed on Sixteenth avenue, west of Eleventh street, was referred to the board of local improvements.

Ordinance providing for construction of a sewer on Twelfth avenue, between Eighth and Ninth streets, was adopted.

Repeal Ordinances.

The commission cleared the records of old Twenty-third street paving ordinances so as to start a new project. An ordinance passed in August, 1912, providing for the paving of the street between Second and Fourth avenues was repealed. A second one passed in August, 1914, providing for paving between Third and Fourth avenues was also repealed. The board will soon start a new project.

The building which has been used as a blacksmith shop, located on the east side of Seventeenth street, between Third and Fourth avenues, and several buildings on Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, between Second and Third avenues, now used for storing junk, are to be condemned.

City Attorney Scott was instructed to prepare ordinances ordering that the buildings be wrecked.

Plans for the $12,000 city barn to be erected on the site of the present one on Sixth avenue, between Ninth and Tenth streets, were approved and the council decided to advertise for bids, to be received May 15.

How are YOU Going to Raise Your LITTLE CHICKS This Year?

NOW is the time to be thinking about the feed you will provide for your little chicks after they are hatched. They will need a feed of fine granulation—one that will be easily digested—a feed that contains the most body-building and strength-giving elements. You will find all these in the most digestible form in oatmeal. After the first few meals of soft feed such as bread crumbs soaked in milk or hard boiled eggs, make the principal part of their ration oatmeal. In doing so, you will be following the plan adopted by the world's greatest poultry experts. Read what a few of them say:

E. B. THOMPSON, ex-President American Poultry Association: "I use Pin Head Oatmeal for young chicks and consider it a valuable ingredient for a poultry food for both young chicks and laying hens. Oatmeal promotes growth, develops bone and increases egg yield."

U. R. FISHEL said: "Any poultry food that contains plenty of oats (oatmeal), is bound to make a good growing feed for poultry."

W. ROY CURTIS said: "We consider oatmeal one of the most important feeds for the successful raising of chicks."

EDW. CORNING said: "Oatmeal is always incorporated in the chick food used on the Corning Egg Farm."

I. K. FELCH: "After 60 years experience we find that among all the grains grown that oatmeal, containing 22% protein (after the hull has been removed) makes growth and development in the young chicks and it is worth just as much in egg production with the laying stock."

P. A. COOK: "For growing chicks, oatmeal in the proper proportion should be a part of the grain mixture to insure hardy, rapid growth and to give them large bones, big frames and general development."

ERNEST KELLERSTRASS: "In reference to the best feed for little chicks, as well as for the grown chicks, there is nothing better than your (Quaker Oats Co.) Oatmeal Feed."

You will make no mistake if you follow the valuable advice of these experts and adopt the feed that years of successful experience in raising young chicks has proved best for their flocks. So when you take off the first hatch this year, be sure to have a sack of Oatmeal Feed ready. For your convenience, The Quaker Oats Co., the world's largest manufacturers of Oatmeal, has prepared a special Oatmeal for Poultry. Here it is:

SCHUMACHER OATMEAL FOR POULTRY

It is all oatmeal, put up in convenient, inexpensive form to meet the needs of poultry raisers. It is just the feed to start your little chicks on 36 to 48 hours after hatching. It will develop bone, muscle and nerves rapidly. For the best results the principal part of every poultry ration should be oatmeal. It is especially fine for the little chicks, so whatever chick feed you use mix a liberal portion of Schumacher Oatmeal with it. Feed it to your little chicks and—

Watch 'em Grow

You cannot expect strong sturdy hens or good layers unless you build from the beginning. Feed the chicks for strong constitutions and you will be well repaid in big meaty cockerels and persistent laying pullets. Oatmeal excels all other feeds for big development, rapid growth and early maturity, so avoid any chick feed which does not contain some oatmeal. For laying hens you will find Schumacher Oatmeal a great help, as I. K. Felch says: "It is worth just as much in egg production as in the growth and development of young chicks."

Put up in handy cotton and jute sacks. Get a sack at your dealers. If he can't supply you, write to us.
